THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK:

God’s Creation of Grace

Did you know that most African animals live in peace? Wildlife videos commonly show animals fighting and slaughtering each other. We might be tempted to think that competition and predation are the norm. But it’s actually quite the opposite. While some animals are carnivorous the majority of animals on the savannah coexist peacefully. When you look out over the plains you see many different species calmly grazing together. It is quite an exceptional event to see predators hunting them. The big cats are facing extinction! The vegetarians are flourishing in their countless thousands. It’s the same on coral reefs. The majority of animals eat algae and parasites, or capture energy from the sun. Many reef dwellers depend on other species for survival.

All animals must cooperate to survive. We humans need hundreds of other species to survive. We rely on stomach bacteria for digestive health. We need trees and plants in great variety to supply the oxygen we breathe. We can’t eat soil, so we depend on lots of plants to extract essential components and supply them to us in tasty ways. All terrestrial life depends on lichens that help produce, during rock weathering, the soils from which plants obtain their nutrients. They live in partnership with green algae and fungi that supply food, minerals, nitrogen and water. Plants utilize the carbon dioxide we breath out as feedstock for their photosynthesis of carbohydrates. Legumes grow nodules on their roots containing nitrogen-fixing bacteria. They provide the bacteria with nutrients and food and, in return, the bacteria convert atmospheric nitrogen into ammonia that is essential for the plant’s life. Eventually, plant nitrogen ends up as nitrates in the soil that fertilize more plant growth and development. Waste is virtually unknown in Nature where recycling is the norm. The waste product pooped out by one organism is nourishment for another!

God designed a harmonious brotherhood of living creatures where sharing, mutual support and help advantage all and where altruism makes sense.

It is so good, on International Day, to see so many different nationalities and cultures sharing their best in mutual care and respect. Let’s carry this on all year round! Let’s emulate God’s purpose by care for our environment and responsibility for all the people groups and creatures we share it with.
